23rd Annual Conference PRELIMINARY NOTICE

TOPIC

Delivering sustainable water services

The Government's recently published Climate Action Plan and Draft Sectoral Adaptation Plan for Water Quality and Water Services Infrastructure presented an assessment of key future climate risks to the sectors and described a range of key adaptive measures required.

The DHPLG has overall responsibility for water quality and water services infrastructure policy areas, and sets out policy objectives and priorities which are given effect by stakeholders such as Irish Water and local authorities. These Plans provide clarity on the nature of the challenges which face the sector and set out the key adaptive measures relevant stakeholders are to consider, for example, water resource management, integrated catchment management and asset management. The outcomes of this assessment are to be considered by organisations and stakeholders within the sectors in future adaptation planning. Irish Water continues to work in collaboration with local authorities to provide resilient water services and have already commenced to implement the key measures. The WSTG Annual Conference provides a forum for taking stock of developments to date and updating on progress of initiatives in the period ahead.
